■ ABSTRACT : Garments are needed by every person according to his/her requirements and the condition where they live and work. Although most of the people now wear readymade garments but still individual tailors are also used by large number of people in the society. There are many organizations, societies and departments where ready-made garment are used. For a supply in large quantities and for fashion and design garment industries came into existence. However each and every industry does not produce the same type of garment. Their quality also varies different but there is a requirement of cheapness and durability of garment. There are different types of jobs in garment making where different processes are involved in order to get produce an acceptable material at low product cost. Lasting of facilities in these departments may affect the quality, cost and acceptability.
